The Gender Country Profile outlines a country’s available data and rankings regarding gender equality. The profile is first a summary of the country’s demographic overview and rankings within established global indices for sustainable development and gender equity. The profile then follows the World Economic Forum Global Gender Gap Index framework to provide statistics on each country in detail.

- United Kingdom is ranked 11th out of 166 countries, with a UN SDG Index Score of 81.7<sup>1</sup>

United Nations (UN) Twin Indices of Women’s Empowerment and Gender Equality

In 2023, the United Nations released a new report, The Paths to Equal, outlining two updated indices on the progress of member nations towards gender equity. The Women’s Empowerment Index (WEI) focuses solely on women, measuring their power and freedom to make choices and seize opportunities in life. Global Gender Parity Index (GGPI) evaluates the status of women relative to men in core dimensions of human development.

- The United Kingdom is ranked 15th out of 114 countries, with a WEI Score of 0.778<sup>2</sup>
- The United Kingdom is ranked 23rd out of 114 countries, with a GGPI Score of 0.821<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The Women’s Empowerment Index (WEI) measures women’s empowerment across five dimensions of human development: life and good health; education, skill-building and knowledge; labour and financial inclusion; participation in decision making; and freedom from violence. Taken from UN Women 2023: The Paths to Equal Report
