NUC – University Expansion

Number of Nigerian universities may double as NUC considers 200 new private university applications

August 2, 2017 Azeezat Adedigba

National University Commission, NUC

Should regulatory authorities in Nigeria approve all the applications they received, the number of universities in the West African country would more than double.

The National Universities Commission, NUC, said it is currently processing over 200 applications for new private universities in the country.

Currently, the total number of universities in the country, with over 150 million population, is 153.

The Executive Secretary of the Commission, Abubakar Rasheed, announced the applications during a meeting with federal universities' bursars in Abuja on Tuesday.

Mr. Rasheed said "the university system is growing" and private universities including federal and state universities can no longer cope with the large numbers of yearly applications for admission.

"Nigeria has 153 universities, 40 are federal universities, 45 are state owned universities and 68 are private universities presently in the country," he said.

TEL Workshop: Objectives

This is a “train the trainers workshop”

Objectives:

- demonstrate knowledge, understanding, and implementation of TEL procedures in online and blended learning as evidenced in the workshop activities
- apply principles from other participants’ institutional context into your own activities during the workshop
- possess knowledge in TEL that will be applied to your own institutional context towards
 - i) the development of courses;
 - ii) delivery of courses; and
 - iii) sharing of courses.

TEL Workshop: Goals

Goals:

- instill confidence in participants to become trainers and advocates of TEL in online and blended learning that will be disseminated among colleagues in your home institution
- apply knowledge from the workshop, and accompanying materials, that will be utilized in the development of quality online or blended learning courses
- create the foundation of a network among participants that will be strengthened and that can be monitored and evaluated by RETRIDOL ultimately leading towards sustainable partnerships
